LATEST NEWS AND UPDATES

WHAT'S NEW AT HIPPOCRATES WELLNESS THIS MONTH?

ASK THE EXPERTS

Q. What is the best way to combat anxiety through diet and lifestyle?

- Susan from Arkansas

A. Anxiety partly comes from a lack of GABA, an amino acid that calms the part of the brain that creates emotional balance. When your gastrointestinal bacteria is not healthy, the messaging that travels up the vagus nerve, turning on the serotonin receptor sites, does not function, which, in turn, provokes anxiety. Eating a raw, organic, plant-based diet helps to clean and renew the gut health. Additionally, taking a clean GABA supplement and the ayurvedic Ashwagandha has proven to help a multitude of people.

- Brian Clement, PH.D., L.N.

Q. Does adding Chlorophyll to drinking water improve my immunity?

- Jamie Rissman, USA

A. Unless you have fresh raw chlorophyll that you extract directly from plants, do not expect it to work. Highly cooked and processed forms and bottles have been neutered, so they offer little to no health benefits.

THINK PIECE FALL INTO WELLNESS

BY ANNA MARIA AND BRIAN CLEMENT PH.D., L.N.

As summer's greens fade to autumn's golds, many of us experience a shift in energy. The shorter days, cooler temperatures, and the lure of cozy, sedentary habits can trigger emotional and physical health challenges. At Hippocrates Wellness, we embrace fall as an opportunity for renewal. By adjusting our routines and wellness practices, we can stay vibrant and healthy throughout the season.

The Seasonal Shift: How Fall Affects Health

Autumn's shorter days can bring on feelings of lethargy, sluggishness, and sadness. While Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD) is often associated with winter, it can begin in fall for those sensitive to reduced daylight. This seasonal shift can also lead to cravings for comfort foods, decreased physical activity, and social withdrawal, which can worsen health conditions like chronic pain, joint inflammation, and digestive issues. At Hippocrates, we see fall as a season of rejuvenation rather than decline.

Addressing Autumnal Challenges: The Hippocrates Approach

Nutrition for the Fall Season

As temperatures drop, many people turn to warm, heavy meals. At Hippocrates, we emphasize a plant-based, living foods diet that keeps you energized and balanced. Foods like root vegetables (carrots, sweet potatoes, beets), dark leafy greens (kale, spinach), and warming spices (ginger, turmeric, cinnamon) provide nutrients that support both body and mind. Our signature wheatgrass juice also helps detoxify the body and boost mental clarity, making it easier to resist sugary, processed foods that leave you feeling drained.

Movement and Mindfulness

While it's natural to slow down as the weather cools, movement remains crucial for energy and health. At Hippocrates, we encourage gentle activities like yoga, T'ai Chi,

"Embrace the change of season as your opportunity to realign, restore, and renew your whole being."

and stretching, which promote flexibility, circulation, and warmth. Outdoor activities like walking also help maintain a connection with nature and support emotional wellness.

Breaking Bad Habits and Building Healthier Ones

Fall often brings bad habits—late-night snacking, over-reliance on caffeine, and excessive screen time. At Hippocrates, we help break these cycles with holistic, habit-building strategies like meditation and breathwork. These practices encourage mindful rituals that promote balance and wellbeing.

Combatting Loneliness and Fostering Connection

Autumn can feel isolating, with the end of summer's social activities and shorter days. At Hippocrates, we emphasize community and connection through group activities, shared meals, and wellness workshops, which help foster meaningful interactions.

With the right combination of nutrition, movement, emotional healing, and connection, fall can be a season of empowerment and renewal, setting the stage for health and wellbeing all year round.

RETHINKING SEASONAL INDULGENCE WITH HIPPOCRATES' CHEF KEN BLUE

As the crisp autumn air rolls in, it's easy to fall into familiar habits of indulging in comfort foods tied to celebrations and nostalgia. But according to Hippocrates' Executive, Chef Ken Blue, it's time for an autumnal awakening. "So many of us associate something sweet with celebration, but the real question is: is that truly rewarding to your body?" Chef Ken asks.

He challenges us to reconsider what makes food "celebratory," reminding us that indulgence is often more about the memories or traditions we attach to a dish than the dish itself. Instead of reaching for foods that may leave us feeling sluggish, why not celebrate with enzyme-rich, life-giving, plant-based meals that nourish from within? As Chef Ken suggests, "If it's a food you rarely eat because it doesn't make you feel good, is that really a treat?"

This season, embrace the chance to gather with loved ones while treating your body with respect—celebrating life through nourishing choices that uplift both your spirit and your health.

CHEF KEN'S RECIPE OF THE MONTH

CHERRY COBBLER

Filling Ingredients:

2 cups of pitted cherries
1 ounce of water
1 pinch of cinnamon
1 teaspoon of psyllium husk powder
1/4 teaspoon of vanilla
4 drops of fresh lemon juice, or to taste

Topping Ingredients:

1/2 cup of chopped almonds
1/3 cup of date paste (pitted dates processed until smooth) A splash of vanilla

Directions:

1. Cut 1 cup of pitted cherries into thirds and set aside
2. Blend the remaining filling ingredients
3. Fold in the remaining cup of pitted cherries
4. Scoop the cherry filling into the dessert bowl
5. Press pieces of the topping between your fingers and scatter the pieces on top of the cherry filling

DR. SHIVANA GUPTA

DETOXING HEAVY METALS & WEIGHT LOSS

"I'm in the health profession, so I already know a lot and have learned so much more while being here. I've already lost eight pounds. I've lost inches off my waist, off my hips - everywhere. It's been amazing. I have seen such a difference in my energy levels and how I feel. I feel so much cleaner whenever I eat food now; it digests way more easily. I've been so impressed with the Colonics and the different services that they offer at Hippocrates Wellness. Suddenly, I know my body is truly cleansed, which really excites and motivates me. Before coming to Hippocrates, I knew that I had heavy metals in my body and high copper levels. Learning about the infrared sauna, the wheatgrass, and all the other ways we can detoxify those metals out of the body at Hippocrates has been enlightening."

ALES TVRDÝ

REBALANCE AND RECALIBRATION

Initially, I thought that my experience with Hippocrates would be mostly centered around raw and living foods nutrition, but I soon realized that it's much more complex than that. I've benefited from all of the lessons, and I consider them truly priceless in all aspects, as they have allowed me to learn, internalize, and become conscious of information and happenings I would not find elsewhere. I am now open to new ideas, which, in turn, allow me to reprogram and update my current beliefs and values to ones more in harmony with all life and nature. I now understand the importance of opening my mind and tuning to the common sense frequency. I feel that living the Hippocrates lifestyle has brought a myriad of benefits to my physical, emotional, and mental health and has opened up a space within me where spirituality can grow and where true happiness lies.
